PRC Laws and Regulations

BEIJING, Aug. 27 (Xinhua) - China's top legislature passed the country's first law on armed police. It not only gives the police new duties but also statutory authority to respond to riots, terrorist attacks and other emergencies. The Law on People's Armed Police Force (PAPF) of the People's Republic of China mandates the mobilization of the PAPF to deal with riots, chaotic situations, serious violent crimes, terrorist attacks and other emergencies. Armed PAPF members will patrol China's municipalities, provincial and regional capitals with weapons during periods of unrest, and also take responsibility for the security of major transport lines and important public facilities. Without defining the times when such activities would be authorized, the law says the PAPF will also shoulder the responsibility of assisting other law enforcement forces in arrest, pursuit and escort missions. The PAPF - drawn from China's police force - was founded in 1982 as an internal security force to provide services ranging from protecting important political figures to urban firefighting. Under the command of the Central Military Commission (CMC) and the State Council, China's Cabinet, the armed police played a major role in quelling riots in Lhasa on March 14 last year and in Urumqi on July 5. BEIJING, Aug. 12 (Xinhua) - China's State Council passed a draft regulation on environmental evaluation over new projects to prevent pollution or ecological destruction from the beginning. Under the regulation, environmental evaluations are required before the planning of development projects could be approved, according to an executive meeting of the State Council, presided over by Premier Wen Jiabao. Such a regulation covers all development activities, from land use and the development of rivers or oceans, to development projects related to industrial, agricultural, husbandry, and forestry sectors as well as energy, water conservation, transportation, urban construction, tourism, and exploration of natural resources. In the latest case, the Ministry of Environmental Protection in June suspended two hydropower station projects over the Jinshajiang River, upstream of Yangtze River, which had been started without environmental approval. China Huaneng Group and China Huadian Corporation, which owns the two plants, were ordered to conduct environment-friendly improvement to their high energy-consuming and highly polluting projects. The regulation would be revised and later publicized by the State Council for enforcement, according to the meeting. The government also reiterated its stance of sticking to the principle of "common but differentiated responsibilities" established by the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change, according to a statement issued after the meeting. The government would continue to work with other countries and play a constructive role for the success of the

Copenhagen conference, according to the statement. China would also include its strategy against climate change into its economic and social development planning, it said. The country would work hard to fulfil the target of reducing energy consumption for every 10,000 yuan (1,470.6 US dollars) of GDP by 20 per cent by 2010, raising the ratio of renewable energy to 10 per cent of the total, and achieving a forest coverage of 20 per cent by then, in its effort to fight the climate change. | The CPI(A), CPI(B) and CPI(C) respectively cover some 50%, 30% and 10% of households in Hong Kong. The average monthly household expenditure (in HK$) of these groups during the base period (i.e. Oct. 2004–Sep. 2005) were $4,000–$15,499, $15,500–$27,499 and $27,500–$59,999 respectively. Taking into account the impact of price changes since the base period, the monthly household expenditure ranges of the CPI(A), CPI(B) and CPI(C) adjusted to the price level of 2008 are broadly equivalent to $4,300–$16,800, $16,800–$30,200 and $30,200–$66,100 respectively, and that of the Composite CPI is broadly equivalent to $4,100–$63,200. The Composite CPI is compiled based on the expenditure patterns of all these households taken together. |                |                |
